Description:

This programme aims to train future leaders using an integral approach. The core of this training process is focused on providing students with the tools necessary to recognize, understand, transform and resolve conflicts in a peaceful manner as a fundamental element for peacebuilding and sustainable human development.

This vision is aligned with that of the United Nations, which holds that the analysis of peace, human development and conflict transformation and resolution must include, transversally, elements related to gender equality and the principle of non-discrimination of any kind, which are essential not only for development but for the very survival of our planet. It is for this reason that the University for Peace has placed particular emphasis on three of the four fundamental pillars of the United Nations, namely Peace, Human Rights, Sustainable Development and Climate Change.
